About the Editors of This Volume

Christopher Honeyman is managing partner of Convenor Conflict Management (www.convenor.com), a consulting firm based in Washington, DC and Madison, Wisconsin. He is co-editor of The Negotiator’s Fieldbook (with Andrea Schneider; ABA 2006), co-editor of all four volumes in the Rethinking Negotiation Teaching Series, a founding editor of 谈判 Tán Pàn: The Chinese-English Journal on Negotiation, and author or co-author of more than seventy published articles, book chapters and monographs on dispute resolution. Honeyman has directed a twenty-year series of major R&D projects in dispute resolution, and has served as a consultant to numerous academic and practical conflict resolution programs in the United States and elsewhere. He has also served as a mediator, arbitrator or in other neutral capacities in more than 2,000 disputes since the 1970s.

James Coben is a professor of law at Hamline University School of Law in St. Paul, Minnesota and former director of Hamline’s Dispute Resolution Institute, consistently ranked by U.S. News & World Report in the top five among U.S. law school dispute resolution programs. He teaches civil procedure and a variety of alternative dispute resolution (ADR) courses, and created three Hamline foreign programs – an international commercial arbitration program in London, an international business transactions negotiation program in Rome, and a program in democratic dialogue and mediation in Budapest. He has published numerous ADR-related articles, is co-editor of all four volumes in the Rethinking Negotiation Teaching Series, a founding editor of 谈判 Tán Pàn: The Chinese-English Journal on Negotiation, and co-author of the third edition of Mediation: Law, Policy & Practice (West 2011).

Andrew Wei-Min Lee is the founder and president of the Leading Negotiation Institute, founded in 2007 and based in Shanghai. The Leading Negotiation Institute’s mission is to develop dispute resolution pedagogy and practice in China. The Institute partners with leading universities and dispute resolution institutions both within China and around the world to provide opportunities to exchange personnel, ideas and opportunities in the field of negotiation and dispute resolution.
